PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

Preliminary Statement

This is a petition for a writ of certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit which affirmed without opinion on September 30, 1974 a judgment of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York entered on May 24, 1974 convicting petitioner after a jury trial, of three counts in an indictment charging him with conspiracy to distribute and thereafter distributing to an undercover agent, on two occasions cocaine in violation of Title 21, United States Code, Section 841(a)(1) and 846 and Title 18, United States Code, Section 2. Petitioner was sentenced to a term of two years on each of the three counts in the indictment, these terms to run concurrently. In addition, a special parole term of five years was imposed (Neaher, D.J.).

Statement of Questions Involved

1. Whether, petitioner's constitutional and statutory (18 U.S.C. Section 3501(a)) rights were violated because a hearing to determine the admissibility of incriminatory statements attributed to him were held by the trial court in the presence of the jury?

2. Whether, the petitioner's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation were violated?

3. Whether, the trial prosecutor's comments during summation deprived petitioner of a fair trial?

Jurisdiction

The judgment of the Court of Appeals was made and entered on September 30, 1974. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked pursuant to Title 28, U.S.C., Section 1254(1).

Facts

This case involved a three count indictment which essentially charged the petitioner with distributing approximately six grams of cocaine on June 21, 1972 and sixty grams on June 27, 1972. The third count of the indictment charged a conspiracy from the period beginning June 20, 1972 and concluding June 28, 1972. The Government's evidence in chief may be summarized as follows: On June 21, 1972, Federal Narcotic Agents Abbott and Coughlan went to 265 Hawthorne Street, Brooklyn, New York, in an effort to purchase one-eighth (⅛) of a kilogram of cocaine from a John Osborne * who, according to evidence adduced at trial, was a well known trafficker in narcotics. The agents were known to Osborne as Ed and Mouse.

Osborne contended he did not have any cocaine in his possession at that time but would contact an associate to see if he could make delivery. According to Osborne, with Agents Abbott and Coughlan within the apartment, he telephoned the petitioner and informed him that he had two customers ". . . who were willing to pay $2.200 for an eighth and can he deliver it to me? He said he would come over later" (R. 196).

Approximately one hour later the agents, who had left Osborne's apartment, returned and petitioner arrived a short time thereafter. While the agents remained in the living room of the apartment Osborne and Rodriguez went into the kitchen. Upon emerging from the kitchen Osborne gave the agents a quarter of an ounce of cocaine wrapped in aluminum foil as a sample. The agents were then introduced to Rodriguez by Osborne as "Ray" (R. 306-336).

According to Osborne the agents inquired of petitioner if the eighth would be the same as the sample. Petitioner purportedly left and said he would return with the eighth within 45 minutes. The agents paid $100 to Osborne for the quarter of an ounce of cocaine. According to the testimony petitioner did not return on that date and the agents departed. The agents thereafter contacted Osborne who informed them that petitioner had indeed arrived with the eighth on June 23, 1972, soon after they had departed. This was June 27, 1972, the subject of Count II of the indictment. At approximately 7:00 P.M. on June 27, 1972 Osborne, as had been pre-arranged with Ed and Mouse (Agents Abbott and Coughlan), sold them two ounces of cocaine for $1,100. Following this transaction the agents left the apartment with Osborne with the understanding they would return later that evening to purchase another two ounces for an additional $1,100. There was testimony that Osborne drove from the area of his domicile in a Pontiac automobile registered to the petitioner. He proceeded to Rodriguez' home at 804 Rogers Avenue, Brooklyn, New York a short distance from the Osborne apartment. Osborne returned to his apartment by bus. The agents soon re-appeared and the three of them awaited petitioner's arrival. After a one-and-a-half hour wait the agents decided to leave but as they reached the lobby of Osborne's apartment building Rodriguez arrived.

The four of them returned to Osborne's apartment. Osborne and petitioner again entered the kitchen while the agents remained in the living room. Upon emerging from the kitchen Osborne gave the agents two ounces of cocaine in return for $1,100. According to the agents and Osborne they inquired that if the cocaine was no good—"who would be responsible?" Osborne accepted responsibility for the quality of the narcotic. Osborne, as aforesaid, testified at trial for the Government. Suffice it to say that Agents Abbott and Coughlan and Osborne's testimony are not at such serious variance that their testimony should be individually summarized.

On July 24, 1972 petitioner was arrested in proximity of his residence at 1:25 P.M. and returned to his apartment. He was given the Miranda warnings and then brought to 90 Church Street, Manhattan in New York City the office of the Bureau of Dangerous Drugs, where the Miranda warnings were again given. At approximately 4:20 P.M. he was questioned by Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin at the U.S. Courthouse at Cadman Plaza, Brooklyn, in the presence of Agent Coughlan.

A pre-trial motion for discovery was timely made by trial counsel for petitioner. However, not until the very inception of the trial did the Government announce that it intended to utilize an incriminatory statement attributed to petitioner by Agent Coughlan who was physically present when Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin questioned Rodriguez in his office. This information was not contained in the Government's Bill of Particulars. It is an irrefutable fact that Agent Coughlan reduced to writing Rodriguez's statement taken at the office of the United States Attorney (Sheerin).

Notwithstanding the aforesaid omissions this most prejudicial evidence was ultimately received at trial contrary to Rule 16(a) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Reasons for Granting Writ

I.

Agent Coughlan testified that he was present when Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin questioned petitioner on the date of his arrest and recorded incriminating statements allegedly made by him (R. 334, 335; 351-354).

Prior to Agent Coughlan testifying on this specific issue petitioner's counsel sought and was granted by the court a voir dire for a ruling as to whether Rodriguez's statements were voluntary and whether the Miranda warnings were properly administered by the Assistant United States Attorney in attendance (R. 331-333).

The voir dire was conducted in the presence of the jury. The failure of the trial court to determine in the first instance the voluntariness of the statements by petitioner was prejudicial error. Moreover, the foregoing constitutes a direct violation of 18 U.S.C. Section 3501(a).

Insofar as is pertinent, 18 U.S.C. Section 3501(a), reads as follows:

> "(a) In any criminal prosecution brought by the United States or by the District of Columbia, a confession, as defined in subsection (e) hereof, shall be admissible in evidence if it is voluntarily given. Before such confession is received in evidence, the trial judge shall, out of the presence of the jury, determine any issue as to voluntariness. If the trial judge determines that the confession was voluntarily made it shall be submitted in evidence. (Emphasis supplied)

Cf. e.g. Jackson v. Denno, 378, U.S. 368 (1964).

This Court decided simultaneous with Jackson, supra, the case of State v. Owen, 94 Ariz. 404 (1963) vacated 378 U.S. 574 (1964). In the Owen's case the Court, as here, conducted a voluntariness hearing in the presence of the jury. This was held Constitutional error by this Court.

In Lopez v. State, (Texas Crim) 366 S.W. 2d 587, vacated 378 U.S. 567 (1964) a murder suspect's confession was introduced, and the issue of its voluntariness was submitted to the jury as was in the case at bar. Nevertheless, this court vacated the State judgment occasioned by the fact that the court in the first instance made no independent finding as occurred in the instant case.

Accord--Harris v. State, 370 S.W. 2d 886 (1963) vacated 378 U.S. 572 (1964); Muschette v. United States, 322 F.2d 989 (1963); Lego v. Twomey, 404 U.S. 477 (1972).

It is abundantly clear that the defect manifested here was in violation of 18 U.S.C. Section 3501(a). As was stated by this court in Lego v. Twomey, 404 U.S. at p. 489:

> "To reiterate what we said in Jackson when a confession challenged as involuntary is sought to be used against a criminal defendant at his trial, he is entitled to a reliable and clear-cut determination that the confession was in fact voluntarily rendered * * * by the trial judge before it is submitted to the jury. Section 3501(a), supra."

Agent Coughlan ascribed a total admission of guilt to petitioner. Such being the case the statutory and Constitutional error evidenced here cannot be deemed of a harmless character. Indeed, the Coughlan testimony had originally been reduced to writing and as such should have been produced before trial (A6-A36). Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 16(a). Instead, it was not produced until the eve of trial precluding any effective attempt at suppressing this testimony pre-trial. The meager attempt at a voir dire style hearing during trial was replete with error of a Constitutional magnitude. This error should not be construed harmless for it was caused by the Government's failure to do their homework before trial and make aware to the defense that this highly volatile evidence existed and precluded meaningful preparation by defense counsel at trial (A37-A43). Cf. United States v. Salazar, 485 F.2d 1272 at pp. 1278-79 (2d Cir. 1973); United States v. Feinberg, 15 Cr.L. 2031 (1974).

II.

On July 24, 1972, at about 1:25 P.M. the petitioner was arrested at his home, 804 Rogers Avenue, Brooklyn, New York by Agent Edward Coughlan and Lynn Wheeler. According to Agent Coughlan, he administered the Miranda warnings at that time (R. 327).

Petitioner was then brought in custody to 90 Church Street, New York, N.Y., for processing and where Agent Coughlan again gave the Miranda warnings. At this juncture, according to Agent Coughlan, petitioner made one brief statement that involved a man named Tacajo as the supplier of cocaine (R. 328, 329, 332).

At approximately 4:20 P.M., petitioner, still in custody, arrived with the agents at the United States Attorney's office. Petitioner was given the Miranda warnings by Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin. Incriminating admissions of guilt were obtained at this time (R. 329-30). The Miranda warnings at that juncture were in the form of a writing given to petitioner and entitled "BND For 14-a".

The trial prosecutor in his opening statement to the jury stated in part:

> "* * * the Government will call one other witness. At this time, ladies and gentlemen, I will not reveal his name to you, but in substance his testimony will go to Osmondo Rodriguez supplying John Osborne with the cocaine which was distributed to the undercover agents. Yes, this witness will testify as to the direct participation of Osmondo Rodriguez and these narcotic transactions" (R. 21).

A perusal of the record clearly demonstrates that the unidentified individual alluded to within the prosecutor's opening statement was Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin. Instead of calling Sheerin the Government produced Agent Coughlan who testified to what allegedly transpired between the Assistant United States Attorney and Petitioner Rodriguez.

Agent Coughlan testified that he overheard petitioner admit to Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin that he had used cocaine for about a year; that he had brought "a quarter of a piece" of cocaine to Agent Abbott and himself on June 22, 1972, at Osborne's apartment; that Rodriguez also admitted to bringing the second half of an eighth of cocaine on the evening of June 27, 1972, to Osborne's apartment; and finally, that petitioner again admitted that his cocaine connection was one Tacajo (R. 334, 335; 351, 352) (A38-A42).

The thrust of petitioner's claim of error in this regard is that the Government failed in its mandatory obligation to call Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin as a witness after the Government assured the jury his direct evidence would be adduced. Manifestly this type of approach tends to subvert the Sixth Amendment right to confrontation within the contemplation of Douglas v. Alabama, 380 U.S. 415 (1965).

Petitioner asserts that the right to be confronted by Assistant United States Attorney Sheerin is a right granted by the Sixth Amendment that he never waived. The absolute right to cross-examine Sheerin and that the jury should have the benefit of observing Sheerin's demeanor and the opportunity to assess his credibility instead of that of Agent Coughlan's was irretrievably lost to petitioner. Certainly, Agent Coughlan was in no position to speak for Sheerin on the issue of voluntariness. Neither could Coughlan speak for Sheerin as to why he made the petitioner read the Miranda warnings and why he choose to interrogate him in the first instance. Obviously this type of approach drastically delimited petitioner to the meager issue as to whether Agent Coughlan accurately overheard the questioning of petitioner by Sheerin.

Parenthetically, it is interesting to note that the record is utterly barren on any valid governmental reason for using Agent Coughlan's hearsay evidence as opposed to Sheerin's direct evidence consistent with the prosecutor's opening statement assurances to the jury.

III.

The trial prosecutor stated to the jury with unusual force:

> "Well, if you believe Agent Coughlan lied, if you believe Agent Abbott lied, if you believe Agent Wheeler lied, if you believe John Osborne lied, then I say to you now ladies and gentlemen—
> Mr. Handman: Objection, Your Honor.
> Mr. Pascarella: (continuing)—Acquit the defendant" (R. 425) (A44).

The prosecutor's argument was patently improper. It is not a required sine qua non, as the prosecutor asserted, that a trial jury in a criminal case must find that Government witnesses have lied before an accused is entitled to an acquittal. The prosecutor's reckless statement rendered ineffectual the teaching that all a jury need find is a reasonable doubt as to the accused's guilt. The error was further intensified by the fact that the erudite trial court omitted to render prompt and curative instructions to the jury. Instead, the jury was permitted to accept the prosecutor's misstatement of the law as a valid truth. In a case as the one at bar, where the petitioner did not testify, and the evidence was not of a lethal character, the petitioner is entitled to a new trial free of such inflammatory trial tactics. The Court's instruction on reasonable doubt buried deep within the main charge after many hours of such improper comment cannot cause such a grave error to dissipate as harmless.

Indeed, in a case as the one at bar which was of short duration, where the prosecutor's summation was delivered the same day, the taking of evidence concluded and the defense summation presented, the impropriety assumes greater significance. Particularly where as here the proof in this case was certainly not of a clear and convincing character. See, A.B.A. Project on Standards for Criminal Justice, Standards Relating to the Prosecution Function and the Defense Function, 127 (1971).

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons the petition for writ of certiorari should be granted.
